

ABSTRACT

Shel C1
A lookup table is fixed in electronically readable hardware such as a ROM inside of an integrated circuit responsible for controlling or interfacing with a USB bus. An index is read and used to pick an entry in the lookup table. That entry provides a Product ID that is combined with fixed vendor information to complete the identification information provided for in the USB specification.